Do Libraries and/or Librarians Really Have a Purpose?

After nearly 47 years serving in the library world in one capacity or another, I certainly hope that there is a purpose. Talking to folks who live in other places, all they have to say is to complain about their taxes, the lack of services and seeing no purpose for libraries. I usually stand up and defend libraries as a whole, but sometimes I wonder just how people see libraries. I read a meme on Facebook, where a high school football player came to the library and they asked how they could help him. He said his teacher told him to find something old and out of date. Ouch that hurt! But then I think, well he’s grown up with technology at his fingertips and has never had to research using the library, and with AI and things like Chat GPT to do research and write their papers, he doesn’t see a purpose.

I’m proud of our library in La Cygne, we didn’t choose to stay in the rut, and as books seemed to go out of popularity, we expanded our horizons and began to investigate ways that we could stay current with the times and actually have a purpose. People looked at us kind of funny as we started to broaden our horizons, DVDs, audiobooks, Hoopla, and online databases. Then we started focusing on programming and what does our community as a whole need?

I started seeing kids who were hungry after school and during the summer. A group was organized and we starting doing summer lunches for kids, then it evolved to kids and caretakers. The senior center closed and we started to offer meals two times a week to help meet that need. Then exercise programs for seniors. Opportunities for social interaction and learning for the seniors. And if there’s anything 2020 taught us was the importance of socialization. Our folks were starving for it. Young moms needed a place to meet and share and learn and our playroom was developed to meet that need. Homeschool kids and families needed a place to come together on occasion and learn so we started doing that. School classrooms need mini-field trips and we gave them a chance to explore learning outside the classroom. All of these things helped keep our library real and relevant.

For the second year in a row our patrons have nominated us as the “Best of the Best in Linn County” and we won. This shows me that we are relevant and we are important to our community. I continue to get stories from folks about the library and what it means to them. I have one lady who every Tuesday and Thursday tells me that these two days are the best days of her week. She is in her late 80’s and lives alone, but loves to come to the library for exercise, eating, and programs. Another note in a card I received talked about being a stranger in our community and knowing no one. She was encouraged to join the groups meeting at the library, no longer an introvert, she is active in the various programs. Other stories what have been told to me in prior years only go to back this up. People (especially older widows or widowers) need a place to escape the isolation of home alone. The library has evolved over the years to meet that need. We are relevant and needed.

If we hadn’t been willing to make the changes to meet community needs, we would be what that guy in the meme was looking for, something old, outdated and irrelevant. Thanks again for voting us Best of the Best in Linn County, for voting us the best library, for voting Chris and myself as best librarians. We also appreciate the fact that we were voted best community center for our activities in the “Great Room” and that you recognized us for our Community Outreach. If you have a story of how the library has helped you and would like to share it. I am collecting some to share to show the continued relevance of the library as a whole.

"THE WORLD'S LARGEST SUNFLOWER COLLECTION"

"The World's Largest Sunflower Collection" (tongue in cheek) is an eclectic mix of items that have a sunflower, The Kansas State Flower, in each items' design. The collection, which started in 1988, is over 2,500 items large. (At 50 items, I started calling it "The World's Largest...", and my wife, Marci, started calling it "The World's Onliest..." hence the tongue in cheek reference) It contains flags, a manhole cover, mugs, pins, paintings, plates, patches, an 1880s perfume card, mud-flaps, candles, state fair ribbons and medals.....You name it, if it has a Sunflower on it, it is a candidate for inclusion in the collection.

Homeschool Day will be January 21st at 10 AM or 1 PM. Lunch served for both groups at noon. Come for some gingerbread fun and we'll also be working on Kansas History activities for a future Young Historians project. RSVP to 757-2151 to let us know if you are participating
